ECUMENICAL INSTITUTE OF THEOLOGY TAPS CYTO TO SUPPORT INSTITUTIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Columbia, Md. – The Ecumenical Institute of Theology selected Cyto Communications, LLC, to provide creative and consulting services in support of the Institute’s institutional development initiatives.

The mission of the Ecumenical Institute of Theology, the evening division of St. Mary's Seminary & University in Baltimore, is to offer accredited ecumenical theological education at the master's- and post-master's- (non-doctoral) level to qualified men and women in the greater Baltimore area. Through its academic programs and community events, the Ecumenical Institute seeks to provide opportunities for personal or professional enrichment; preparation for voluntary or professional leadership in a church, school, or community organization; and a basic theological foundation for ministry.

“The Ecumenical Institute has been changing lives and standing alone at the top of advanced ecumenical education in the Baltimore region for 40 years,” said Cyto managing partner Rich Badmington, APR. “We’re honored to have been invited to help them continue their leadership and strengthen a unique institution.”
